The voice of the mother is enabling us all - men and women - to become more conscious of the choices we make, and how contributing to the betterment of the world is so tangibly in our hands. It is both daunting and empowering to realise how much influence mothers have, and to listen to their medley of wise, instinctive, tentative, humble voices as we celebrate the the onward march of womankind.

It was after that the decision was made to fully commit to the voice calling to Elsa being that of her mother, Iduna. As Marc Smith, Frozen 2 's Director of Story, notes in the documentary, the idea "unifies the movie" since it starts with a flashback featuring Iduna and Agnarr, and it brings those elements together.
